INTRODUCTION.

THE accompanying List has been brought out in compliance with the request of a large number of Old Scholars desirous of obtaining information relative to their contemporaries at Croydon School, and includes a complete list of Scholars educated there from its opening in 1825 down to the final removal to Saffron Walden in 1879; the information respecting them being brought down to the close of 1881. As will be readily imagined the compiling of the List has been a work of time, and, from the length of the period over which it extends, and the number of individuals included, the information respecting several is doubtless deficient, and in some others imperfect or incorrect, notwithstanding the care which has been exercised to obtain, as far as possible, reliable information. Wherever any such deficiencies are observed the compiler will feel greatly obliged by having correct information supplied to him, and thus enhance the value and interest of the List. The total number of Scholars contained in the following, amounts to 1,837, exclusive of those children of the several Superintendents, who were not regularly initiated into the School regulations, but who, nevertheless, were partly educated there; four of these however are included, they being a rather special exception even to this distinction, thus bringing the total up to 1,841. It will be seen that those on the girls side who afterwards married, have not only their maiden names inserted in the first place, but that the name taken by marriage is attached. A second List is given in which the name by marriage stands first, the better to assist in identification:—these of themselves number something over 300 names.

In addition to the foregoing it may not be uninteresting to give a few particulars of the earlier history of the School, in connexion with which so large a number of individuals are associated. Originally founded about the year 1702, its then objects were threefold,—the support of the aged, the maintenance and education of children, and the employment of both—being denominated "FRIENDS' SCHOOL AND WORKHOUSE," at Clerkenwell: it was set on foot by means of voluntary subscriptions amongst the Members of the Society of Friends in London, and continued under the notice of the Society in the City and environs, receiving from time to time considerable aid by donations and legacies, whilst from like sources funds originated for particular purposes tending to the benefit of the children educated under its care. In 1788 the establishment was removed to a spot on the East side of Islington Road, but still in the parish of Clerkenwell, where, by the aid of benefactions of various kinds, or of subscriptions on annuities for lives, a School House had been erected on ground taken of a public Company for a term of 148 years, from Midsummer, 1786. The expense of this building amounted to £5,500, exclusive of the cost of tenements for aged friends, who, after being removed with the children from the former premises, were not immediately provided for, but were accommodated for a time in a house at Plaistow, Essex. In course of time it was found that the association of the aged Friends with the children in one establishment, especially with regard to the greatly increased expense of supporting the former, could not be satisfactorily continued: and after much serious deliberation, on the 15th of 2nd mo., 1811, the Quarterly Meeting of London and Middlesex adopted the following minute in substance—

"To suspend with the consent of the Monthly Meetings concerned, that part
"of the establishment which had relation to Ancient Friends; to open
"the School (which it was agreed should in future be denominated
"FRIENDS' SCHOOL under the care of the Quarterly Meeting of London
"and Middlesex) to the four Country Monthly Meetings belonging to that
"Quarterly Meeting, as also to some neighbouring Quarterly Meetings,
"on condition of their uniting with the London Monthly Meetings in
"contributing towards its support; but under certain restrictions, so as to "secure the rights of the children who were the original objects of the "foundation, and for whose benefit the particular funds before alluded to,
"being funds for apprentice fees and other purposes, are decidedly con"sidered to have been intended, and to adopt, with respect to the mode of
"admitting children, the regulations of the institution at Ackworth."

This new arrangement came into operation on the 1st of 7th mo., with the understanding that 100 children should be regarded as the future complement to be provided for. Matters now assuming something of definite shape and order, the first printed report was issued in 1814. A few years more and we again approach a period of change, fraught with great importance to the Institution, and landing us in that epoch of its history which is most associated with the object of publishing this little work. In consequence of the great increase of buildings in the neighbourhood of Islington, the premises there became by degrees unsuitable for a School, and the Quarterly Meeting came to the conclusion that it ought to be removed; accordingly a very eligible property at Croydon was purchased in 1822, and upwards of £11,000 was raised within the compass of the Quarterly Meeting of London and Middlesex to meet the increased expenditure made necessary by the removal, and the erection of additional buildings for the requirements of the School, which was arranged to provide for 150 Scholars, 80 Boys and 70 Girls, and was opened on the 8th of 11th mo., 1825. It may be mentioned as a matter of interest to Old Scholars of that period that upwards of 100 Islingtonians are known to be still living, one of whom (Anthony Dawes) was the first Scholar to leave the School after its removal to Croydon in 1825. At this time Croydon was but a small town of some 10,000 inhabitants, and the Railway paraphernalia, since introduced there, was a thing unknown; the first Railway being opened in 1839, which, for a considerable distance, was laid in the bed of the old canal, and there are many of the Old Scholars who will remember the wooden drawbridges on the canal, which were afterwards replaced by the present brick-built structures that now span the Railway on the Epsom line. The more recent history of the Institution has become pretty familiar to all interested in its proceedings; a history fraught with much of change; the periodical visitation of epidemics, culminating in strong prejudices against the retention of the School at Croydon, and which led to its final removal to Saffron Walden in 1879.

Whatever may be said of its management, experiences and surroundings of the past, the Institution has been productive of untold blessings to the sons and daughters of Fox, and there are hundreds still living prepared to yield a willing testimony to personal benefits received. May like results follow the old School in its new home, "Excelsior" being its motto and "Truth" its aim.

The following lines were read at the Farewell Meeting at Croydon in 1879, and, several applications having been made for a copy, it has been thought well to insert them here.

SURREYANA :

OR

FAREWELL TO CROYDON SCHOOL.

Near by the hills of Surrey,
Those most beautiful hills !
Where grow the yellow furze and heather,
And the husbandman tills.

Far, far away in the long past,
Some fifty years ago,
Uprose our Alma Mater
The seeds of truth to sow.

Since then what mighty changes
Have marked life's checquered way,
The seed-time and the harvest home,
To this bright zenith day.

What a grand and noble muster roll
In vision comes to view,
Well nigh two thousand precious souls
These honor'd walls once knew.

Some tread the soil of other lands,
A thousand tread our own ;
Five hundred 'neath the greensward mound
Sleep in the silent tomb.

Oh ! what myriad voices
Proclaim we've here no rest,
Then let us sound the battle cry
On to the " Realms of the blest."

In eighteen hundred twenty-five
A Dymond took the helm,
To steer the ship from Islington
To Croydon's haven'd realm.

Oh ! what a freight went then on board
With tried and trusty crew,
To man the ship and bring her safe
Like Quaker Sailors true.

And now she's anchored safe and sound
By Wandles flowing river,
The Quaker flag once more unfurled,
And shall it droop ? Oh ! never.

Since then how many a sailor true
Has manned this ship and tried her,
Of Captains, Mates, and General Crew,
O'er strands and storms to tide her.

When Captain Dymond struck his flag
In eighteen thirty-three,
Our first mate Brady took command,
A right good man was he.

His body weak, but strong in mind,
And influence, moral, grand,
He made his mark and left a name
Wide over sea and land.

And when in eighteen thirty eight
By death he went his way.
Elizabeth, his loving wife,
Still ruled with gentle sway.

And when she also left our ship -
In eighteen forty two,
Promotion came to good John Sharp,
A sailor tried and true.

Then on thro' ten eventful years
Right well he filled his post,
In storms and sunshine, ebb and flow,
Our ship oft tempest toss'd.

But now a time of sickness came
As oft it had before,
And soon the mournful tidings spread,
Our Captain was no more.

Those days will not be soon forgot
By those who then were there,
First one and then another steer'd
In duty's call to share.

Fryer, Smith and Robinson,
Did each in turn preside,
The first he died, the second fell,
The scourge spread far and wide.

But now at length the plague was stay'd
And health and peace did reign,
And down through many an after year
The seasons came the same.

Till eighteen seventy now was reached
And Robinson retired,
A well earned rest, a goodly reign,
On every hand admired.

And now a Linney takes the helm,
And still he rules the ship,
Long may she ride o'er wind and tide
Her fame on every lip.

Speed her well ye pleasant gales
Till safe in Walden harbour,
Long may she serve as training ship
To youthful minds and ardour.

And when the final summons comes
To all who've sailed within her
To plough no longer time's rough main,
May all meet at the River.

May cross its dark and troubled tide
And join the ransomed ever,
Who through faith, in Christ have died
And cease his praises never.

From every nation gathered home
Around his footstool fall,
Who sitteth on the great white throne,
The Great King, Lord of all.

* * * * *

And now farewell, a long farewell,
To Croydon, dear old Croydon,
To Croham, Duppas, Addington,
And off to Saffron Walden.
